After graduating in Rome in 1957, Portoghesi becomes one of the first architects to pit himself against functional rationalism both with his studies on Guarino Guarini and Francesco Borromini, and the surprising Casa Baldi in Rome (1959) where he unites the Avant-Garde and Baroque.

PAOLO. PORTOGHESI, AND MARIO BOTTA The rational language of modernism lost its authority in Italy in the 1960s when less rational reference points for the design process, like historical memory, offered alternatives. Examples of four "postmodern" architects — Aldo Rossi, Gino Valle, Paolo Portoghesi, and Mario Botta. Directed by Paolo Portoghesi, the very first Venice Architecture Biennale (1980) was a postmodern manifesto: the ornamented polychromous facades that lined the 'Strada Novissima', the main exhibition set up in the Arsenale, bid a gleeful farewell to modernism's serial monotony and universalizing claims. Thirty-four years.
